I perform testing of GO requirements for completeness and consistency by Claude (Model: Sonnet 5, medium).Here is the summary with all bugs and screenshots.

Consistency issues:

1. Wrong name in testimonials (D3. Philanthropy)
   The two client quotes are attributed to "Liselotte" — but the site subject throughout is Gregory Olsen ("Greg"). This looks like copy-pasted content from a different photographer's site that was never updated.

Alexandra Frida: "Liselotte has shot our last two campaigns and we have experienced Liselotte as professional, calm, focused and comfortable on set.(..)"

Cluse Watches: "I really enjoyed working with Liselotte. What I really value is her professional approach and ability to listen to your needs as a client and her intention to promptly deliver materials that will completely meet your vision and ideas."

2. Section title doesn't match content (D3. Philanthropy)
   The page is titled "Philanthropy," but the actual copy is a personal bio essay about being introverted and gaining confidence — nothing about charitable work. Either the title is wrong or the content is missing/misplaced (it may belong in D1. Bio & Press instead, which already covers biography).

People who know me from school might know me as a shy boy. I've always been an introvert (and I still am), but now I finally see the positive qualities about being an introvert instead of being insecure about this all the time. A topic that I would like to share you more about.

I started shooting images at a young age, I think I was 13 years old and my interest for webdesign and making digital magazines in Word and Paint Shop Pro became my hobbies. That is also the reason why I'm currently dealing with RSI (pain in my right hand and arm thanks to the computer mouse..). For my self made websites I wanted to shoot images and I loved to capture photos of our cute puppy and our family walks in the nature. This is how I learned about my camera settings and how I developed my love for photography. Luckily my parents supported my creativity.

It really helped me to gain confidence to be myself through my work and meanwhile it was an escape from the real world. I could create everything I want and I noticed I was getting better by reading books and magazines about photography. People started talking positively about my photos and gave me compliments, something I really appreciate during my years as a shy teenager. I didn't felt secure about my self, but I did feel very good about my photography because I enjoyed it so much.

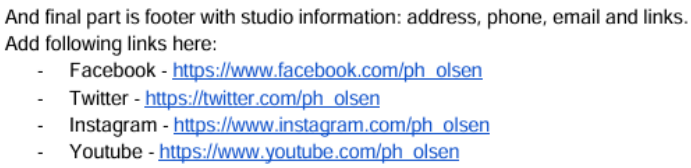

Soon I noticed that if I wanted to become a fashion and portrait photographer, I should have a lot more self confidence because as a photographer you are the one that makes the big decisions during the shoot and you have to control a whole team. It was absolutely not possible to be shy or quiet during a shoot, so in the next years I learned how to take control of the shoot by organising a lot of shoots. Actually, I already felt a 100% different with a camera in my hand. I became another person, I know it might sound crazy, but I still feel this. For example: when I'm at a birthday party with a lot of people I don't know I feel not very comfortable, but when I'm at a shoot with a lot of people I don't know, I actually feel pretty good about myself.

I noticed my photos became better during the shoots where I tried to step out of my comfort zone. This motivated me to organise more shoots and keep practicing the social skills of being a fashion photographer!

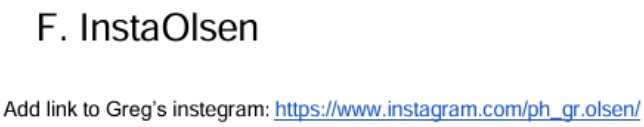

Fun fact, I asked clients and team members how they experienced working with me, and what they all said is that I'm very relaxed on the set and that I am a good listener, things that are very important if you work with clients.

3. Two different Instagram handles for the same account

- Section B footer: https://www.instagram.com/ph_olsen

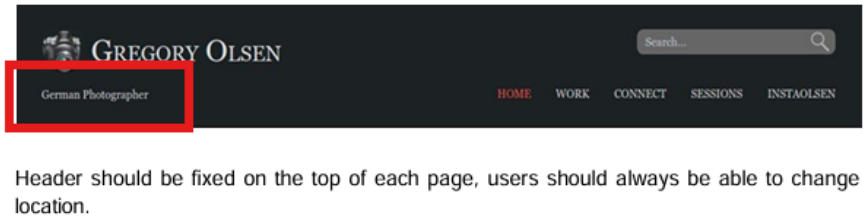

- Section F (InstaOlsen tab, dedicated to Instagram): https://www.instagram.com/ph_gr.olsen/

These need to be reconciled — the InstaOlsen tab is the primary CTA for this and it doesn't match the footer link.

4. Conflicting geography/nationality signals

- Header subtitle: "German Photographer"

- Footer address: "Whistler, British Columbia, Canada"

- Footer phone: +44 0207 435 2086 (UK country code)

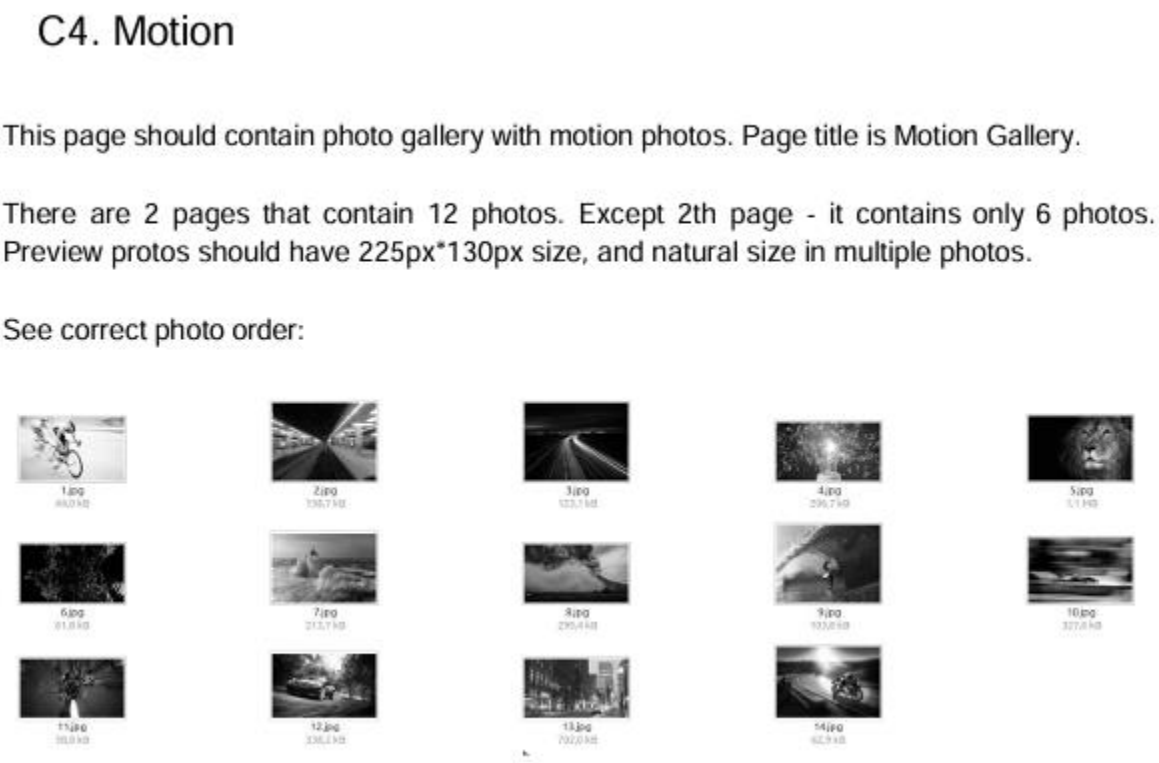

Three different countries implied for one studio — needs a single source of truth.

High (logic/data mismatches)

5. Motion gallery math doesn't add up (C4)

Spec says "2 pages that contain 12 photos. Except 2nd page - it contains only 6 photos" (12+6 = 18 total), but only 14 photos (1–14) are actually listed. Either the "6" should be "2," or 4 images are missing from the spec.

6. Clients Gallery order/content doesn't match its own example (D2)

The numbered list (1. Devienna Anggraini, 2. Elizabeth Auffenberg, 3. Max & Tara Axler, 4. Ashley & Rich Baccari...) doesn't match the order shown in the "how it should be done" mockup (Devienna, Elizabeth, Ashley & Rich, BFYTBODY...). Worse, Alex Ching (#10) and Emcor (#14) are entirely absent from the reference mockup even though they're in the numbered list. Dev will need a definitive, corrected order.

7. Phone field spec contradicts sample data

E2 specifies Phone as numeric type, max 12 characters. But the footer example phone (+44 0207 435 2086) has a "+" symbol, a space, and 15+ characters — it would fail the very validation rule the doc defines. Numeric-only also blocks legitimate "+" country codes.

8. "alpha type" misapplied to fields that need numbers/symbols
Several fields marked alpha type (letters only) will reject valid input:

- Address (needs house/unit numbers)
- Postal code (many formats are numeric or alphanumeric — Canada, US, UK)
- Email in both D4 Contact and E2 Book Information (should be email type, and D4's own error message even says "Valid email is required," contradicting "alpha type")
- Message in D4 (alpha-only would block punctuation, numbers, common characters in a free-text message)

9. Placeholder token typos in E3 email template
<selested_session_name> → should be <selected_session_name>; <posteal_code> → should be <postal_code>.

10. Footer link formatting inconsistency
Body text lists full https:// URLs; the footer mockup screenshot shows bare www. links (no protocol) — minor, likely just display style, but worth confirming which is the intended rendered format.

And final part is footer with studio information: address, phone, email and links.

Completeness issues:

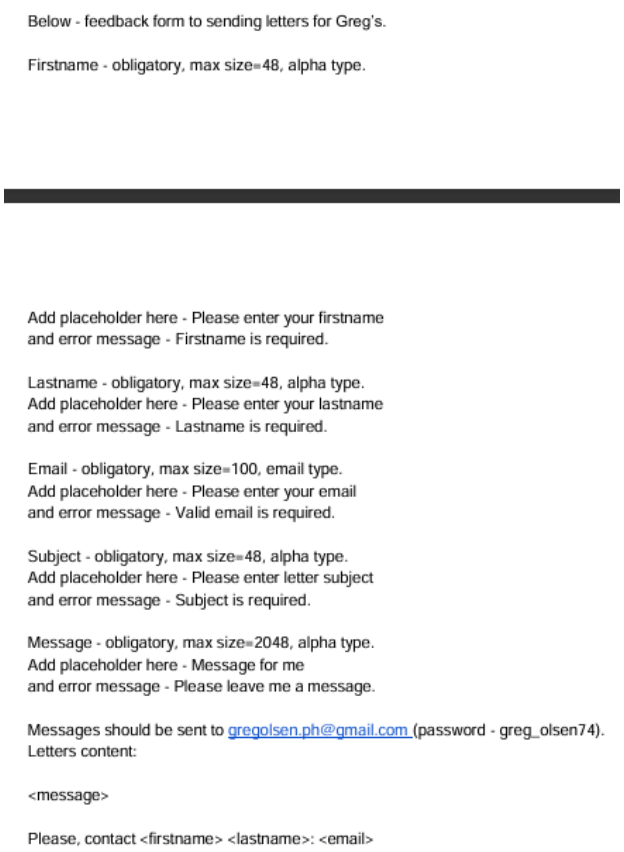

9. Apartment field marked obligatory

E2 lists "Apartment" as required — but not every customer has an apartment/suite number. This will block valid submissions for anyone at a single-unit address. Likely should be optional.

Apartment - obligatory, max size=100, alpha type.
Add placeholder here - Please enter your apartment, suite, etc.
and error message - Apartment is required.

10. Subject field captured but never used

D4's contact form collects "Subject," but the outgoing letter template (Please, contact <firstname> <lastname>: <email>) never includes it — so it's collected but discarded.

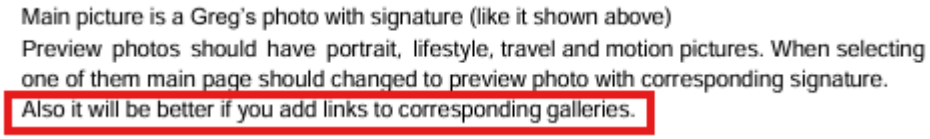

11. Interaction rules for Work galleries only fully defined for Portrait (C1)

Grey/white hover frame, tooltip format ("p5"), and multi-photo lightbox behavior are detailed for C1 only; the note "the same rules should be done for Lifestyle, Travel and Motion" is a single line after the photo list, leaving scope (does it include the tooltip numbering format too?) implicit rather than explicit.

12. Soft requirement language mixed into hard specs

Phrases like "it will be better if you add links to corresponding galleries" (Home, DEMO section) read as optional/nice-to-have but are embedded among firm "should" statements — unclear whether this is in-scope for v1.

So,This is all about what Claude finds from this document.
